
BPM FinTech Roundtable

05.20.15

Tech-enabled lending is perhaps the hottest spot for financial innovation today. For the first time in banking, the online marketplace allows third parties to bring together borrowers who need financing with investors who have cash to lend.

With this comes a host of questions and challenges such as:

- How does the alternative lending sector respond in a rising rate environment?
- How durable are the bank partnerships that enable non-bank lenders to export rates to all 50 states?
- Is current investor perception about the inherent advantages of the marketplace model over the balance model justified? How long will it last?
- What are the successful strategies for managing rapid growth in a credit-oriented business?

Join us as we partner with JMP Securities and Lend Academy for an interactive discussion around the various considerations lenders need to think about to avoid pitfalls raised by the changing face of online lending.

This program is part of BPM's FinTech Roundtable Series. If you would like to learn more about BPM's services to the FinTech community, or to attend future roundtables, contact Daniel Figueredo at DFigueredo@bpmcpa.com